Crisis Management in Construction

By Toby Cushing | Monday, July 19, 2021 | ConstructionExec.com

It’s no secret that all businesses should have a plan in case of emergency. For construction companies, it’s extremely important because the business can be shut down due to disasters or unexpected events.

From natural catastrophes to global pandemics, a crisis can come at any moment and have a huge impact on jobsites and projects, affecting all subcontractors and trades involved. This includes carpenters, laborers, plumbers and electricians. No matter what happens or who’s on the job, every emergency requires prompt action to help minimize or control the potential effects on the business and development. So, knowing what to do and how to create a crisis management plan can help.

COVID-19 Funding

TruFund Financial Services Launches the Southern Opportunity and Resilience Fund (SOAR) for Small Businesses in Louisiana

Offering Small Business Loans of Up to $100,000

TruFund Financial Services, Inc. is a part of a diverse group of local and national community finance organizations launching the Southern Opportunity and Resilience (SOAR) Fund, a program getting small businesses and nonprofits across the South affordable capital and critical business support at a time when they need it the most. TruFund Financial Services, Inc. will make capital available to small businesses in Alabama, Louisiana, Georgia and Texas.

The Covid-19 pandemic has exacerbated an already uneven recovery coming out of the Great Recession. Southern states had slower economic growth, lower labor force participation, and higher unemployment than the rest of the country, partially driven by the historic lack of corporate, bank and philanthropic investment in the region. The SOAR Fund tackles these issues head-on by providing capital to southern small businesses and nonprofits that need it now.
